Festival	Zuki festival								Kyoto Shimogamo Shrine	Dai Ginza Matsuri									Funaoka Matsuri - Kenkun Shrine							Jidai Matsuri :Heian Jingu Shrine		Kyoto Antique Fair, Pluse Plaza
About the Festival	An autumn harvest festival with two mikoshi portable shrines bedecked with zuiki (taro stems). Full schedule: https://tockify.com/whatsupinkyoto/detail/227/1538319600000								Traditional music and entertainment performed as people pray for a good harvest from 1.30pm at Shimogamo Shrine in north west Kyoto.	Held every since 1968, the 100-year anniversary of the Meiji Restoration. Parades, bazaars and bands fill the streets of Ginza in Tokyo with colour and music but the main attraction has to be the bargain sales held by the major name stores in the district.								Warlord Oda Nobunaga is enshrined in Kenkun Shrine and every year on October 19, the day Oda first entered Kyoto in 1568, participants in period dress re-enact his march into the city.							Jidai Matsuri to be found at any of Japan's autumn festivals. Consists of over 1,700 marchers representing figures from Japanese history in a five-hour long parade. The procession starts from the Imperial Palace (Gocho) in Kyoto at noon and heads west along Marutachi dori, then south on Karasuma to Oike dori, then through Gion and Sanjo dori culminating at Heian Shrine		One of the largest antique fairs in Japan with over 350 dealers from Japan and overseas selling their wares.

Festival										Konpira Matsuri: Yasui Konpira-gu, Kyoto				Nada Fighting Festival	Sennin Musha Gyoretsu				Yabusame Festival
About the Festival										The main event is on the 10th from 11am.				It is said that the rough and tumble of fighting festivals pleases the gods - and the rougher the better. Mikoshi battles and hand-to-hand scrapping for all to enjoy in Himeji. Young men in loin cloths carrying portable shrines battle to reach the bell in the courtyard of Matsubara Shrine. The first man to ring the bell is blessed with good fortune by the shrine priests. The Himeji Kenka Matsuri is one of Kansai's most colorful festivals.	Sennin Musha Gyoretsu (lit. procession of a thousand warriors) a reenactment in period costume of the 1617 procession accompanying the remains of Tokugawa Ieyasu to Nikko.			Yabusame (horse-back archery) festival performed by young boys. There is a procession of men in samurai costume and dressed as dragons, followed by the archery contest with elaborately dressed and made up young boys.
